In the Ericsson Mobility Report November 2019 edition, we continue to expand our knowledge and projections for the telco industry, looking back at developments over the past year as well as exploring what lies ahead for communications service providers as 5G networks continue to emerge and expand.

By the end of 2025, we expect 5G to have 2.6 billion subscriptions covering up to 65 percent of the world's population and generating 45 percent of the world's total mobile data traffic, making it the fastest developing mobile communication technology to have ever been rolled out on a global scale.
